Bar Exam: Tu-W 7/25-7/26

Prep time was allotted among subjects according to (a) frequency of appearance on the exam, (b) breadth of topic matter, and (c) the weekend/holiday days their review will contain per the above. (However, you could mash or re-order any stage(s) of the review in light of your comfort level with the individual subjects. See 'Adaptation'.) During 'Refresh' days you should devote 1 hour each day to the assigned subject – in addition to your usual workload. Your 'Resolution' reviews should be more focused on trouble spots than mere re-surveys of each subject in its entirety. Independently, you should still continue to rotate through the MBE subjects as part of your ongoing MBE practice regimen. If you fall behind or anticipate a period during which you will not be able to study according to plan, then reduce the remaining time allotments proportionately or cut down on Resolution days. This timetable enables you to keep your bar prep on a steady, incremental, yet advanced pacing.
